This is delightful fall weather.

The street sprinkler is again in demand.

Are you not glad you live in New Mexico such days as these?

Days that you have to use both ice and coal are the melancholy days.

The annual New Mexico fair begins at Albuquerque Monday, October 12th.

The metropolis of New Mexico now boasts of forty saloons and an Elk play house.

The town is being billed today for the big show. It is only live towns that catch the shows.

Which will get to Roswell first? The surveying corps of the Santa Fe Central or the advance representatives of the D.D. & W.

The Wolcott forces won out in the Republican convention in Colorado. The Republicans for years in Colorado have been divided into cat and dog factions.

The knocker is always out of place except on your front door, and even here it is a little antiquated. Bells are preferable to knockers in towns as well as on doors.

Governor Otero has called an Irrigation Convention. It is to convene on the 13th at Albuquerque. An unlucky day, but it is hoped that the convention will overcome the day.

The Santa Fe Central has fitted up some elegant new offices in Santa Fe and have moved in them. We have several good locations right here in Roswell for some railroad offices.

A National Employees' Association was organized at Chicago this week. At its first meeting there was more than a billion dollars of capital represented. Its foundation principle is the "open shop."

A man wants permission of the state of Colorado to ship embalmed oysters through the state. There has been much said about embalmed meat, but now we have the embalmed oyster. Would you like to try a dish or fry of these?

The immigration question is again pushing itself to the front. There has been an increase this year of 38 per cent over that of last year. In other words 64,977 immigrants landed in this country during the past twelve months compared to 45,549 during the previous twelve months.

Between the lines the president's letter reads that he is a friend of organized labor, on conservative lines, but that he is not its slave. There are many things about Roosevelt in addition to his politics that we do not admire, but we do admire his frankness, and his straightforward manner in "going at" questions. He does not "take up" questions, he "goes at" them.

The President is Firm.

The President is having almost as much trouble with his printing office as THE RECORD had last spring. The position taken by the President on this question cannot be criticised by any right thinking man. President Roosevelt is a friend of organized labor. His record shows it, but he also refuses to become the slave of an organization. The government printing office like THE RECORD office is now an "open shop," and the President intends that it shall remain so, not in any disrespect of the labor unions of the country, but because by the laws of the country and common justice it should be so. The following is his letter:

Pursuant to the request of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, the President granted an interview this evening to the executive council of that body: Mr. Samuel Gompers, Mr. James Duncan, Mr. John Mitchell, Mr. Jas. O'Connell and Mr. Frank Morrison, at which various subjects of legislation in the interests of labor as well as executive action were discussed. Concerning the case of William A. Miller the President made the following statement:

"I thank you and your committee for your courtesy, and I appreciate the opportunity to meet with you. It will always be a pleasure to see you or any representative of your organizations or of your federation as a whole.

"As regards the Miller case, I have little to add to what I have already said. In dealing with it I ask you to remember that I am dealing purely with the relation of the government to its employees. I must govern my action by the laws of the land which I am sworn to administer and which differentiate any case in which the government of the United States is a party from all other cases whatsoever. These laws are enacted for the benefit of the whole people, and cannot and must not be construed as permitting discrimination against some of the people. I am president of all the people of the United States, without regard to creed, color, birthplace, occupation or social conditions. My aim is to do equal and exact justice as among them all. In the employment and dismissal of men in the government service I can no more recognize the fact that a man does or does not belong to a union as being for or against him than I can recognize the fact that he is a Protestant or a Catholic, a Jew or a Gentile as being for or against him.

"In the communication sent me by various labor organizations protesting against the retention of Miller in the government printing office, the grounds alleged are two-fold: First, that he is a non-union man; second, that he is not personally fit. The question of his personal fitness is one to be settled in the routine of administrative detail, and cannot be allowed to conflict with or to complicate the larger question of governmental discrimination for or against him or any other man because he is or is not a member of a union. This is the only question now before me for decision; and as to this my decision is final."

Catholic Improvements.

Plans are now being completed by Nelson & Co., architects, for the residence for the Catholic priests in Roswell. The house will be built on South Main street, corner Main and Deming streets, one of the finest locations in the city for a dwelling place.

Plans for the church, to be erected on the same property, are also under consideration and the building of the church will follow the erection of the dwelling, in the near future.

The Catholics of the city attend services at present at No. 911 N. Main street. The members of the parish are very anxious to have a suitable place to attend services and are looking forward to the time when the church is to be erected.

We have also been informed that erecting a school, of which Sisters will take charge.

Pudding at Beginning of Dinner.

The custom of serving pudding as the first course at dinner seems to have interested a good many people of our day. A gentleman from Maine informs the writer that it is still the custom in certain sections of his state. In the autobiography of the Adams family it is mentioned that at a dinner given by the venerable ex-president of the United States, at which his grandchildren were present, the first course was Indian pudding, and the little folks were told that the more pudding they ate the more beef they could have. So of course they gorged themselves on the pudding, and as a consequence they had no appetite for beef when it was served. Thus were maintained the simple and economical methods of the forefathers. The boys who came to the city from the country and later became the successful and wealthy merchants of Boston were raised in a most frugal manner. Their breakfast the year round was of brown bread and milk and the same for their supper. The dinner was of baked beans and pie, rarely any meat.—Boston Transcript.

A Picturesque Statesman.

The El Dorado Republican gives a picture of an early statesman and his picturesque attire: When the Hon. David L. McCabe was elected to the legislature from Butler county in 1895 and went to Topeka to be sworn in he astonished not only the natives, but everybody else, as he was the most gorgeously dressed statesman that Kansas had ever produced. He was very dark, with long black hair. On his head was a coonskin cap, the tail of the coonskin hanging gracefully down his back. His coat was made of wolfskins nicely tanned and lined with red flannel. Six handsome tails hung from his coat tails and flapped in the breeze as he meandered up to the speaker's desk to take the oath. He wore a spotted doekin vest, buckskin knee breeches, handsomely fringed-top boots, gloves made of beaver skin, a watch chain done in beadwork, a flannel shirt with a flaming red bandanna pocket handkerchief around his neck, and it is needless to say, he created a sensation.

Inappropriate Quotations.

The following is a good example of inappropriate quotations: A clergyman appointed to an East End living found his parish church sadly in need of repair and gave orders for its renovation. While this was in hand the idea occurred to him to visit the mission halls in connection with it to see what might be needed there. In one of them which was used as a mission chapel he found a state of indescribable filth from end to end and an accompanying effluvia. In disgust he raised his eyes toward the roof and could hardly repress a fit of laughter on reading the text stenciled on the wall behind the pulpit, "How dreadful is this place!" Another story is of an old Presbyterian clergyman who, away on a preaching engagement, found above the bed on which he was to sleep the singular advice, "Occupy till I come."—London Chronicle.

Luck and Labor.

If the boy who exclaims "Just my luck!" were truthful he would say "Just my laziness!" or "Just my inattention!"

Luck is waiting for something to turn up.

Labor, with keen eyes and strong will, will turn up something.

Luck lies in bed and wishes the postman would bring him news of a legacy.

Labor turns out at 6 o'clock and with a busy pen or ringing hammer lays the foundation of a competence.

Luck whines; labor whistles.

Luck relies on chances, labor on character.

Luck slips down to indigence; labor strides upward to independence.—Christian Advocate.

A Puzzle Fable.

An American heiress was wooed by a foreign prince, who urgently besought her to become his wife. In order to test the sincerity of his love he asked, "Will you still marry me if I give away all my money for charity and become as poor as yourself?"

The prince considered awhile, and then responded, "Yes, provided you will still marry me if I renounce my title and become a plain republican person like yourself."

Query.—Did she agree to his proposition?—Smart Set.

He Worked On.

Wife—George, this burning of the candle at both ends means an untimely grave. It is nearly 12 o'clock. Come to bed.

George—But I'm doing this night work in order to find money enough to buy you a birthday present.

Wife—Well, if you will persist in working of course I can't stop it. Good night, dear.

Drinks and Drops.

"Jenkins must be a pretty straight fellow. Dobbins tells me he never drinks a drop."

"So? You probably misunderstood Dobbins. What he said must have been that Jenkins never drops a drink."

—Baltimore News.

Sure Remedy Not Available.

Rev. Pastor—Mrs. Wakely tells me they have a great deal of trouble in getting their baby to sleep.

Mrs. Temple—I suppose it is too young to take to church.—Stray Stories.

Rivals.

Percy—My papa owns a newspaper. Jimmie—Jat's nuthin'. I buy and sell sixty of 'em every day!—New York Times.

Did universal charity prevail earth would be a heaven and hell a fable.—Cotton.
